PLEASING TO LABOR.

The decision of the federal district pourt of appeals in the case of the Bucks Stove and Range compar against the American Federation Labor, austaining the injunction, b recognizing wide theries in the way of trade papers freedem must be a crumb of comfort to the great abor leaders. While the "We Don't Patronize" column is condemned by the majority of the judges, the chief justice of the court is of the opinion that it is legal and agrees with the position taken by the labor leaders. Since the right to talk in The Federattopist about the relation of labor the prosecuting company is proneunced legal there really appears to be no need of the "We Don't Patronize" column, and it could be dropped from view without in any way interfering with the purpose of the editor or labor leaders. The finding simply tells The Federation that it must

WELL-DISCIPLINED SCHOOL CHILDREN.

The State Fire Marshals' association of America is conducting a campaign in various states for the passage of a law like the Ohio state law making instruction in fire dangers compulsor; in all the schools. The Ohio law is ages of six and fourteen years on the subject of fire dangers. A textbook containing forty lessons on the subject, prepared by the state fire mar-shal and published at the expense of state, is provided for by the law, and boards of education are charged with the duty of seeing to it that a chapter from this book is read one day every week in every room in all schools where the children taught are within the age limits fixed by the law. In addition, the national banks now owe government over $50.000,000.

A western paper, opposed to any emergency scheme to increase the revenues, says: "Even if Uncle Sam's vest were to continue to shrink away from his trousers, he has enough ding money to keep him going for another year. HE COULD BUY LAND CHEAPER. There will always be opposition to the good roads movement and a great deal of the antagonism is founded up-on selfishness rather than upon devotion to economy or fack of appreciation of a good thing. It is said that in Kansas a traveler remarked to a native: "You ought to have better tion. over, but the native, being honest and frank, replied: "H'm! Not yet. I don't want no better roads now. I want to save up a little more money and buy some more land before the roads are made better, 'cause I can buy land cheaper when the roads are bad." NEW ENGLAND'S OLD ORCHARDS New England's old orchards may be its pride, but its young orchards are its reliable source of revenue. The orchard like the hen, is on too many farms left to take care of itself. A Vermont paper says: "If some farmer fifteen years ago had fenced in ten neres of his pasture land and begun planting the plot to some of the standard winter apple trees, giving to the erchard the same care sed attention received by his meadow land, he would today have a source of income that would make him the envy of the whole township. And if the beginning is made now there are many reasons to believe that the results will be even nore satisfactory fifteen years hence. What New England needs is new orchards and old orchards that are ultivated in accord with 20th century ideas.
